Dear Colleagues,

This is the third and last circular of the ILRS Technical Workshop 2009 that took place in Metsovo, Greece, last September. With this circular we would like to announce the addition of a “Presentations” web page under the workshop pages at (Fig.1):

http://www.ntua.gr/MIRC/ILRS_W2009

Once you follow the red banner link on the main page it will take you to the components frame (Fig. 2) where you will see the “Presentations” link on the left navigation bar with a flashing “UPDATED” banner. Following that link brings up a scrollable Workshop program (Fig. 3), where every presentation is a link to its PDF version. In addition to the main workshop site that is hosted at the National Technical University of Athens, Greece (NTUA) you can also find a similar site containing the same information (only what is under the Presentations link!) hosted by NASA Goddard’s CDDIS at (Fig. 4):

<http://cddis.gsfc.nasa.gov/metsovo>

For your convenience, in addition to the individual PDF files for each contribution, each session’s files have been zipped and are available for batch download by accessing the link that is indicated following the end each session’s entries and on the left side of the program list.

Finally, towards the end of the page you will find the links to the Executive Summary, the Position Papers and the Summaries for each of the Position Paper Sessions, as well as the complete Workshop report which includes all of these summaries and position papers, along with the workshop program.

CD & DVD to be mailed next

You will soon receive by post a CD that contains the Presentations page with all the files for your offline perusal and as a record of the meeting proceedings. The CD will be accompanied by a DVD with pictures and video from the meeting, the social evening functions, and the excursion to the archeological site of Dodoni and the city of Ioannina.

We thank you all for participating and contributing in the success of the Workshop and we hope that you will enjoy reviewing the presentations that contain a wealth of information and ideas on the topics covered at the meeting.
